Founded in 1879, the Journal of the American Chemical Society is the flagship journal of the American Chemical Society and the premier medium for the publication, worldwide, of fundamental research in all areas of the chemical sciences.

With 257,810 total citations in 2005, JACS is far and away the most cited journal in the field. Devoted to the publication of the best research papers in all fields of chemistry, JACS published more than any other journal in the Multidisciplinary Chemistry category with 3,391 articles published in 2005, more than 18,000 pages of new chemistry for the year.

"It is imperative that scientific publishing in general, and the ACS and JACS in particular, keep abreast and take full advantage of the latest advances in publishing. It is with this in mind that in the last couple of years JACS has already introduced and will continue to make changes to keep at the forefront of chemical publications."

—JACS Editor-in-Chief Peter J. Stang
